We have taken every care to use the correct images where possible when representing our product line and their key features however we are unable to use photos of the exact model in every circumstance. Our photography is based around our core models – as the differences between the core models and other model variants are usually very minimal, with most common variants being wheel base length, transmission or suspension. For example: On the Canter 3.5 short wheel base page, the images used in the animation are of the medium wheel base model which is identical in every way except for wheelbase length. For clarification of model pictured, please refer to disclaimer at bottom of page under the animation.

Any statements made in this website that refer to a range of Fuso models, a specific model or a specific feature as being "best in class" is made based on the Japanese branded ADR80/02 model class when compared against the equivalent Japanese branded ADR80/02 model. For clarification purposes, the Japanese branded model class includes the following competitors: Isuzu, Hino and Nissan UD Trucks.

The claim that Rosa is the bestselling bus in its class for six years is made based on Vfacts sales volumes 2004-2009, as reported by Vfacts.
